Henry WATKINS & Temperance HUGHES Descendants

First Generation

1. Henry (4th of the name) WATKINS was born after 1735 in Prince Edward County, VA. He died about 1798.

Henry Watkins, Prince Edward Co. was appointed guardian for Anderson Watkins, son of his deceased brother, Thomas Watkins and Sally Walton.

"A CATALOGUE of the Descendants of THOMAS WATKINS of Chickahominy, VA. Who was the Common Ancestor of Many of the Families of the Name in Prince Edward, Charlotte, and Chesterfield Counties, VA., by Francis N. Watkins, Prince Edward County, VA." Page 7 and 8:

"HENRY WATKINS was the eldest child of Thomas of Chickahominy. He married Temperance Hughes, of Chesterfield, the near relative of the Jessie Hughes who married a daughter of the late Capt. Hez{?} Morton, of Prince Edward (County). He removed at an early period after his marriage, or about that time, to Prince Edward, and located himself on the head waters of Bush River, residing at the death, at the present residence (in 1852) of the widow of the late Henry N. Watkins. He also owned a farm near Prince Edward C. H. He was a plain, unpretending man, greatly respected and beloved, especially by his kinsmen; that he was a great favorite with them is shown by the fact that so many of his relatives are named after him. He was distinguished for his industry and for his benevolence, and without being parsimonious, he practiced, both from principle and necessity, great economy. My mother tells me he was regarded as the "model husband" of his day, and his neighbors used to say 'that his wife's death caused his own." He died about the year 1798. He raised a large family of children, who, with their descendants, are mentioned in the catalogue. One of them, Thomas Watkins, deserved most "honorable mention." His father determined to give him the advantages of the education afforded by the best schools of the period of his youth, and although the Revolutionary war presented the full executive of his purposes in this respect, he received more cultivation than was usually bestowed on the sons of planters. In 1780'82 Thomas Watkins made an earnest appeal to the patriotism of his neighbors and youthful companions, to render their aid in achieving the liberties of their country. By his successful efforts a troop of volunteer cavalry was organized in Prince Edward [county], and he was elected its captain. He offered his company to Gen. Lee, and desired to be received into his "Legion"; his troop presenting a rather plain and unattractive appearance his application was refused; subsequent events proved that Gen. Lee had acted unwisely, and when the General afterwards requested that the Prince Edward troop should join him, Capt. Watkins indignantly refused to acquiesce in the proposition. He served under Gen. Greene, and at Guilford C. H. in March 1781, was distinguished for his bravery. I have heard often of the gallantry of this company on the occasion, and authentic anecdotes have been preserved of their bold, daring captain, who was often seen on the field, inspiring, by his conduct and his words, with courage, the spirits of a disheartened soldiery, and in {__?__} combat he won laurels. Col. Washington wrote Capt Watkins a letter, after the action at Guilford, in which the conduct of the Prince Edward troop and their commanding officer were highly commended. After the close of the war, Col. Watkins (for he was made a colonel of militia, lived in Prince Edward, at the plantation afterwards owned by his son, Dr. S. V. Watkins. He rendered much useful service to his country as a Justice of the Peace and as a good citizen. During his last illness he revealed a fact which had caused him much unhappiness, but which he had until then concealed from his friends. He stated that in a {__?_}} charge at Guilford, in a personal encounter with a British officer, the latter asked for "quarter," but, in his impetuosity, the Colonel stated that he killed his adversary. The event, he added, had caused him much unhappiness from its occurrence to the end of his life. He died about 1797."

FOOTNOTE:

"Our Uncle Henry is not the only one of that name who hopes to be remembered as a model husband. If meek and becoming submission, to home authority, and love and admiration of their wives constitute any claim of that title, there are many fine specimens of such character among the race, and I feel fully authorized to refer to several of my kinsmen and, if modesty allowed me, to him who [pens] these lines as proof positive of what I've said; I doubt not that some of

Quote: "In the Revolutionary War a troop of horse, known as "Watkins Troop," raised in Prince Edward county, fought with conspicuous bravery; their leader, Thomas Watkins, grandson of Thomas Watkins of Chickahominy, at the battle of Guilford Court House, March, 1781, was distinguished for his gallantry; winning laurels in single combat."

He served in the Revolutionary Army under General Greene and was distinguished for bravery on the field of Guilford Court House, 1781. Col. Washington wrote Captain Watkins a personal letter--still in the hands of members of the family-- commending the bravery of the company and of its commander. HENRY WATKINS ALLEN: Brigadier-General, Confederate States Army, and Ex-Governor of Louisiana.

Henry Watkins Allen was born in the county of Prince Edward, near Farmville on the 29th day of April, 1820.

http://members.tripod.com/debmurray/usbios/pevabioref.htm

His father, Dr. Thomas Allen, a graduate of Hampden-Sidney College, was of Scotch extraction. His mother, Ann Watkins, was descended from a Welsh family.

The first mention of a "Watkins" in the history of Virginia, was of one "James Watkins," a companion of "Captain John Smith," in his expeditions of 1607-8. The Watkins are related to many of the best Virginia families; the Finchards, Carringtons, Venables, etc. In the Revolutionary War a troop of horse, known as "Watkins Troop," raised in Prince Edward county, fought with conspicuous bravery; their leader, Thomas Watkins, grandson of Thomas Watkins of Chickahominy, at the battle of Guilford Court House, March, 1781, was distinguished for his gallantry; winning laurels in single combat.

Henry W., the subject of this sketch, was the fourth son of Dr. Allen. A biographer describes him as "rash, but true; quick, but not malignant; flashing with sudden ire, but sweet and sound in temper; with nothing hidden, nothing mean, heartfelt warmth, earnest affection, constancy, generosity, no revenge, with a softness and tenderness of soul almost feminine."

In 1833, Mrs. Allen having previously died, Dr. Allen with his motherless children, moved into Kay county, Missouri, leaving the remains of the gentle wife and mother to rest beneath the green sod of "Old Virginia."

With the subsequent history of Allen we may not deal in detail in so short a sketch, same to note the fact that in 1861 he re-visited Virginia, and spent a short time with his relatives in Prince Edward county. Whilst there he went to the family cemetery to see his mother's grave. "Never," says his cousin, the late Honorable Francis N. Watkins, father of Judge Asa D. Watkins, present Commonwealth's Attorney, a sketch of who life appears elsewhere in this work, "did I witness such uncontrollable emotion as seized him as he approached that hallowed spot."

Henry Watkins Allen died in exile, in the city of Mexico, on Sunday, April 22nd, 1866, at 11 o'clock in the morning.

From "History of Prince Edward County, Virginia, From its Formation in 1753 to the Present" by Charles Edward Burrell Published in 1922 by The Williams Printing Co. in Richmond, Va.

"General Henry Watkins Allen: Confederate Officer and Governor of Louisiana, by Frances S. Ramsey" [The Southsider, Vol. XIV, No. 3 (1995), pp. 65-74]

"The tumultuous and adventurous life of Henry Watkins Allen began in Prince Edward County near Farmville, Virginia, on April 29, 1820, and ended in exile in Mexico on April 22, 1866, a year after the close of the War Between the States.

"Although he spent most of his life outside Virginia, Allen was descended from distinguished Virginia families -- Watkins, Finchards, Carringtons and Venables. He was the son of Dr. Thomas Allen and Ann Watkins. His mother was the daughter of Thomas Watkins, who distinguished himself at the battle of Guilford Court House in March of 1781. Thomas, the Revolutionary soldier, ws the grandson of Thomas Watkins of Chickahominy. A close Watkins relative of H.W. Allen, Thomas Watkins Ligon, won elected as governor of Maryland. (Sarah A. Dorsey, Recollections of Henry Watkins Allen, New York: M. Doolady (1866), p. 18.]

"In 1833 after the death of his wife, Dr. Thomas Allen moved his family of seven children from Prince Edward to Kay County, Missouri, [Dorsey, p. 21.] Henry had attended school in Virginia at the home of his uncle, Henry Watkins. He entered school in Missouri for a short time, and then his father decided to make a merchant of him by placing him in the store of S.B. Stromache in Lexington, Missouri. [Dorsey, p. 23.] After a year of storekeeping, Henry longed to go back to school as he wanted to be a lawyer or a soldier. Realizing how unhappy Henry was in the store, his father allowed him to enroll in Marion College in Philadelphia, Missouri. At the age of seventeen, Henry ran away from college and traveled down the Mississippi River to Grand Gulf, Mississippi. Although he knew no one in Grand Gulf, he soon secured a position as teacher to the sons of a wealthy planter, William R. McAlpine, who lived a few miles from town. After he taught there for a few years, he decided to move into Grand Gulf, open a school, and study law on the side. For a while he instructed during the day and studied at night. Then he decided to devote his full time to law studies and was soon licensed to practice in Mississippi on May 25, 1841. [Vincent H. Cassidy and Amos E. Simpson, Henry Watkins Allen of Louisiana, Baton Rouge: Louisiana State University Press (1964), p. 13 (refers to note 6, chapter 3). Hereinafter called "C&S".] Henry's law practice was showing signs of success when, in 1842, President Sam Houston of Texas called for volunteers to maintain the freedom of that new nation. Henry joined the volunteers in Mississippi, and unbeknownst to him his brother, Nicholas, enlisted in Missouri. Nicholas died in the battle of San Jacinto. Although Henry was only twenty-two years old, he exhibited great ability in military command. At the close of the war, he received thanks and praise from President Houston and Secretary of War George W. Hockley. [C&S, p. 16]

"Henry Allen returned to Grand Gulf and his law practice. There he met a young girl, Salome Anne Crane, who was the daughter of a well known planter near Rodney, Mississippi. Her parents delayed giving their blessing for a marriage "...as they apparently looked upon Allen as a fortune hunter." [C&S, p. 18) After waiting a while, the couple eloped and were married on July 4, 1844.

"Four days after his marriage he took up the quarrel of his friend, the Reverend Dr. Hunt, a Presbyterian minister, who had been criticized by the Vicksburg Sentinel. Allen challenged and fought a duel with Dr. R.H. Marsteller, a physician of Grand Gulf. They fought with large pistols, loaded with buckshot, at a distance of three paces (ten feet). Both men were badly wounded. Mrs. Dorsey, Allen's biographer, described allen's wound in alatin as:" In abdominis partibus inferioribus vulneratus fuit Allen; ictu transcidente and lacerante prorsus membra vitalia." [Dorsey, p. 31.]

"In 1846 Henry Allen was elected to the legislature of Mississippi. The young lawyer took a prominent part in the proceedings of that body. He later described this period as the happiest of times for him; his marriage was a happy one and his legal and political fortunes were progressing. Suddenly his young bride was stricken with consumption and gradually faded away. She died in 1850 after only six years of marriage. They had no children. After Salome's death Allen was

"After the death of Salome, a distraught Henry Allen moved his negroes to Tensas Parish, Louisiana. This change of scenery did not overcome his sorrow and grief. To regain his strength of body and mind, he went to Cooper's Well in Mississippi, which was famous for the healing effects of its waters. There he met Colonel John Nolan who was old and sick. Allen showed the aged man kindness. When the Colonel left the Wells, he insisted Allen go with him to Baton Rouge where he would find a more profitable setting for his practice of law. Nolan engaged the young lawyer in the management of his estates. At his death he allowed Allen to buy half interest in one of the largest sugar producing plantations in Louisiana with no down payment, which in reality presented Allen with a large fortune. [Dorsey, p. 40 and C&S, pp. 23-24.]

"Allen moved to Allendale in west Baton Rouge Parish and shortly afterwards decided he wanted to return to college to finish his education that he abandoned when he left Marion College. Leaving his fine estate in Louisiana, he entered law school at Harvard University. Shortly after this he went to Europe intending to take part in the Italian War. He arrived too late to take an active role in the war, but he did spend several months in travel before returning to Louisiana where he had been reelected to the legislature in his absence. Throughout his journey to Europe as well as on trips through the south and during travels north and east when he went to Cambridge, he wrote almost daily for the Baton Rouge Dailey Comet using the name of Guy Mannering. [C&S, p. 27). As a member of the legislature, he took a position of leadership in that body. Mrs. Dorsy states that:

"He was quick and ready as a debater, spoke with sharpness and energy; his utterence was rapid and distinct; his enunciation clear and defined; always enthusiastic, he was sometimes violent, but he had the fortune to have generally his political adversaries his personal frieinds. [Dorsey, p. 48.]

"At the close of the 1860 legislative session, the Baton Rouge correspondent of the New Orleans Picayune described Allen as follows:

"H.W. Allen, of West Baton Rouge, is about five feet nine or ten inches high, spare made, ruddy complexion, quick piercing eyes, a classical forehead, and wears most generally a good-natured smile on his countenance - is about 40 years old. He is graceful in manners, neat in dress, and every inch a gentleman. In debatre his style is passionate - quick in ideas, quick in speech, but with an utterance clear and distinct; and in argument, he always takes the shortest way to his point - never elaborating or explaining anything by metaphor or comparisons, but enforces facts or statements with good plain English, in a clear, plain bold mannerCaptain Allen [he concluded, after describing Allen's recent political history] is a reliable man [who] carried out his word. Such a man all must admire, respect and honor. [C&S, p. 65.]

"A trip to Virginia in 1861 took him to Prince Edward County, the birth place of his ancestors. He was accompanied to the grave of his mother by his cousin, the Honorable F.N. Watkins of Virginia. Also buried in the cemetery was Colonel Thomas Watkins who Peter Francisco considered the best soldier in the Southern Army in Revolutionary days, and allen's maternal great grandfather, Nathaniel Venable who had been a member of the House of Burgesses in 1767. [Dorsey, p. 54.]

"At a state convention in January 1861, Louisiana voted to secede from the Union, but Allen did not feel the conflict would be imminent and after his trip to Virginia, he went to Cuba before returning to Louisiana. [C&S, pp. 67 & 69.) He announced his candidacy for the Confederate Congress but later withdrew from the campaign to begin forming militia companies. Twelve of these companies became the Fourth Louisiana Regiment of which he became Lieutenant Colonel and was second in command. The regiment first engaged in conflict at Shiloh Church. There were many wounded and killed on both sides and it ws a victory for neither army. Allen bravely led his troops even though he received a severe wound in his cheek. The Fourth Regiment was soon sent to Vicksburg to prepare defenses and mount guns. [Dorsey, p. 73.]

"From Vicksburg Allen and his men relocated to Camp Moore in Louisiana where they hoped to recapture Baton Rouge which had fallen to the Federals on May 28, 1862. Allen led his men with reckless bravery against the Federal cannon. Just as he was within fifty paces of the cannon, it was fired. He absorbed the full force of the discharge and was taken from the field as if dead. [C&S, p. 86.]

His men seemed in utter confusion after his removal from the battlefield. Colonel Gustavus Breaux, "The shock was terrible among the men of the Fourth Regiment whose confidence seemed to repose mainly on him." [C&S, p. 86.] Allen was wounded about 9:00 A.M. It was afternoon when Dr. Amzi Martin, a skilled surgeon, came to look after him. General Breckinridge had told Dr. Martin, "Find Allen - save him - stay with him Doctor! He is as brave a man as ever God made." [Dorsey, p. 144.] Dr. Martin wanted to amputate his leg but Allen refused, saying he would rather die. [Dorsey, p. 144.] The bones of his right leg were shattered and a ball had passed through the flesh of his left leg. He spent four months at the home of Mr. Granville Pierce with Dr. Martin continually with him for three weeks. When he had made some recovery and walked with crutches, he visited his old regiment. The men of the Fourth Louisiana crowded around him, seized his hand and kissed him. Some even took him in their arms and embraced him. Mrs. Dorsey said, "The enthusiastic love this man inspired in nearly all who approached him intimately was very remarkable." [Dorsey, p. 147.]

"To recuperate from his wounds Allen again went to Cooper's Wells. While there General Pemberton, thinking Allen too incapacitated for active duty, appointed him President of the Military Court at Jackson, Mississippi. Allen declined this because he hoped to return to the field. He also received an appointment of Major General of the Militia of Louisiana from Gov. Moore. This also was declined. [Dorsey, p. 233.]

"In October 1863 he received the appointment of brigadier general from President Jefferson Davis and was commanded to report to Gen. E. Kirby Smith in the Trans-Mississippi Department. [C&S, p. 94.] Allen barely entered upon his duties when he was elected governor of Louisiana. After the fall of New Orleans, Louisiana was divided and had two state governments. The Confederate capital moved from Baton Rouge to several locations before its final establishment at Shreveport.

"On January 25, 1864, General Henry Watkins Allen was inaugurated Confederate Governor of Louisiana. One newspaper reported that "His [augural] address was that of a patriot, statesman, and soldier, and was followed by thunders of applause from the audience. We confidently repose the destinies of the State in his hands." [C&S, p. 236] This was his challenge to the people:

"Let every man who owes service to his country go to the army. Let every man who stays at home do his duty - frown down extortion and vice in every shape and form. Be true to your self and leave the rest to God. Be true to yourself and the country is safe." [C&S, p. 101.]

- "Allen entered into his term as governor with a program to contribute to the war effort and to provide as much as possible for his pepole. Some of his proposals accomplished the following:
- "1) Improved the financial situation of the state by transferring the tax in kind on cotton which he could secure for the state from the Confederate government to the state to pay off the debt owed the state of Louisiana by the Richmond government.
 - "2) Established a state system of stores, factories and foundries.
- "3) Arranged a state dispensary to furnish medicines at cost and free distribution to the poor. In the entire operation of the dispensary, it paid into the treasury $795,925.24. [Luther Edward Chandler, "The Career of Henry Watkins Allan", (Ph.D. dissertation, LSU, 1940), quoted in C&S, p. 106.]
 - "4) Established laboratories for preparation of indigenous medicines.
 - "5) Put up turpentine distilleries and a castor oil factory.
 - "6) Had a factory for making cards. He promised every woman in Louisiana a pair of cotton cards. [The cotton card was used in disentangling and combing fibers in preparation for spinning. It was usually a coarse wire brush with a wooden back or handle.] [Dorsey, pp. 239-41.]

"During very difficult times, Governor Allen provided for the welfare of his people in every possible way. The state stores which he established furnished clothes, shoes, household articles, kitchen utensils and groceries. In 1864 the store turned in $400,000 to the state treasury and, in 1865, one and a half million citizens who were unable to pay were provided necessities free of charge. [C&S, p. 111.] The war did not prevent him from having a Louisiana English Grammar compiled and published as well as a Louisiana Spelling Book. [C&S, p. 112.] All these activities had been accomplished in a short period of time during war. He was able to maintain the value of the Louisiana currency which was more valuable than Confederate money. [C&S, p. 112.] He had "...established order, restored confidence, and demonstrated the concern of the state for the welfare of its people." [C&S, p. 113.]

"After the fall of New Orleans in 1862, the Trans-Mississippi Department had been formed consisting of three districts: Texas and the territory of Arizona; Arkansas, including Arkansas, Missouri and the Indian territory; and West Louisiana. [C&S, p. 119.] When General E. Kirby Smith in command of the Trans-Mississippi Department received the news of Lee's surrender in April of 1865, he was ready to continue resistance. Allen at first favord this position but soon realized that his "sacred cause" was lost. The governors of the Trans-Mississippi area met and drafted what they considered acceptable terms of peace. Allen had been authorized to negotiate with Federal officials. He waited for a guarantee of safe conduct from Grant to go to Washington or any other designated site to surrender the Trans-Mississippi Department. [C&S, p. 130.]

"When no guarantee was received, Allen knew his role in the peace negotiations had been by-bassed. There was no bargaining position left. He realized that poverty and exile would be his lot. His friends were convinced that he would be arrested and imprisoned if he remained in the country. [C&S, p. 131.] As far as he could, he arranged to meet and settle all just claims against the state of Louisiana. The Confederate States had transferred to Louisiana a large quantity of cotton. He requested that enough be set aside to pay the state's creditors. [Dorsey, p. 286.]

"Allen published his farewell message to the people of Louisiana on June 2, 1865, and left Shreveport forever. [C&S, p. 133.] He journeyed through Texas to visit his dear friend, Sarah Dorsey, in Crockett, Texas. With his friend and aide, Col. Henry Denis, who traveled with him to Mexico, another friend and two servants, he left the Dorsey home on June 7 to begin his journey into exile. The servants would turn back before they reached Mexico City to return home as frre men. [Dorsey, pp. 298-399. The full text is quoted.] On June 23 the group crossed the Rio gerande on barges and reached Mexican soil. Before they arrived in Mexico City on July 27, their horses and mules had been sold and the exiles traveled by stagecoach.

"In a letter to Mrs. Dorsey, Allen stated that he was learning the langauge and planned to give English lessons to a few good families. "I find I can make a support which is all I want, thank God. I, at least, breathe free air, and although I am poor and penniless, yet I am a free man; not shut up in a dreary prison. Poor Mr. Davis." He also told her he had received an invitation to be presented to Emperor Maximilian and Empress Carlotta. Apparently he did not teach English very long, for in September he made arrangements to publish an English newspaper called the Mexican Times. He said of the venture, "I am out of money and must do something to live. I am too proud to beg, and too honest, I hope, to steal." [C&S, p. 134.]

"Life in Mexico was not easy for Henry Allen. He wrote Mrs. Dorsey that he worked twelve hours every day. He wrote all his editorials and then had to see to getting up the paper as he could not afford an assistant. His health continued to deteriorate, and in April of 1866 he planned to go to Paris to a celebrated doctor for treatment on the leg that was severely injured in the battle to recapture Baton Rouge. [Dorsey, pp. 331-331.] He had refused amputation of the leg and through the years suffered continuous pain. He was never able to make that trip for he died in Mexico City on April 22, 1866. [Dorsey, p. 354.]

"When news of his death reached New Orleans, about fifty of his friends met and pledged fourteen hundred dollars to bring his body back to Louisiana. Certain precautions and Mexican regulations had to be followed before his body could be repatriated. After all stipulations had been satisfied, the body arrived in New Orleans on January 24, 1867, and was buried the next day. The H.W. Allen Monumental Association had announced that he would be buried in Baton Rouge. This group was very upset and disappointed. Therefore they did not erect a monument to him until 1872. It was not until July 4, 1885, that his body was moved and placed on the capitol grounds in Baton Rouge with thousands of his friends in attendance. [C&S, pp. 158-161.]

"Allen was a wanderer and a traveler in life. It seemed that in death Henry Watkins Allen's body was destined to rravel to several locations before reaching its final resting place in the state he loved and for whom he suffered so many hardships."

Allen, Henry Watkins (1820-1866) — Born in Prince Edward County, Va., April 29, 1820. Son of Dr. Thomas Allen and Ann (Watkins) Allen; married to Salome Crane. Member of Texas state house of representatives, 1853; general in the Confederate Army during the Civil War; Governor of Louisiana, 1864-65. Presbyterian. Died in Mexico City (Ciudad de México), Distrito Federal, April 22, 1866. Interment at Old State Capitol, Baton Rouge, La. Allen Parish, La. is named for him.

NOTE: His brother Nicholas is not included in Henry N. Watkins "Catalogue":

In 1842, President Sam Houston of Texas called for volunteers to maintain the freedom of that new nation. Henry Watkins Allen joined the volunteers in Mississippi, and unbeknownst to him his brother, Nicholas, enlisted in Missouri. Nicholas died in the battle of San Jacinto.

DONOR INFORMATION

The Marie Oliver Watkins Papers were donated to the State Historical Society of Missouri by her sister, Rosalie Prevost

Watkins Wilson on March 12, 1964 (SHS Accession No. 260).

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

Marie Oliver Watkins was born on November 25, 1885, in St. Louis, Missouri, to James Allen Watkins, Sr., and Harriet Rebecca Purkitt Watkins. She was the oldest of four children and a 1910 graduate of Washington University of St. Louis and the St. Louis Library School. She also attended the University of Michigan and Wayne State University and served as a library cataloguer in the Carondelet Branch of the St. Louis Public Library. During World War I Watkins worked with the Ordnance Department in Washington, D. C., and later edited a house publication for an insurance firm. She was a librarian with the Detroit Public Library from 1925 until her retirement in 1950.

The 1928 discovery of five gunnysacks of carefully preserved letters, wills, deeds and other records fueled an interest in family history. She corresponded extensively with family members and traveled to England and all over the United States documenting the Watkins' family genealogy. At the urging of her paternal aunt and namesake, Marie Watkins Oliver, she began compiling, with Helen Hamacher Buchanan Watkins, the historical genealogy of her family. The resulting work, Tearin' Through the Wilderness, Missouri Pioneer Episodes, 1822-1885, was published in 1957. Marie Oliver Watkins died in 1959.
